

THE
NAMES OF THE LORD JESUS
IN THE EPISTLES.

LONDON:
G. MORRISH, 20, PATERNOSTER SQUARE.

In order to ensure greater accuracy, the names following are not taken from the Authorised Version of the New Testament, but from a new translation published by G. Morrish, 20, Paternoster Square.

P R E F A C E .

THE names of God and of Christ are not mere names, such as those we use to distinguish one person from another, but designate qualities, or attributes, or dispensational relationships, and thus are indicative of the character in which God, or Christ, is spoken of in the place where the name is used. This makes a reference to these names often of moment, and facility of reference to them very convenient. And, while the study of the particular passage is that which, with divine help, gives the best insight into the use of the particular title, yet the gathering them together in one collected whole, gives a clearer perception of how large the field of inquiry is.

The use of special names in particular epistles too, tends to characterise the epistle itself, and the mind of the Spirit in it. Thus, in Thessalonians—the freshest of all the epistles, addressed to new converts in all the bloom of their living and early faith, though in the midst of persecution, and taught to look constantly for Christ—we have the simplest names given, and of titles peculiar to them one only in each, and these as simple, and experimentally personal as the rest.

Something of the same kind will be found in Timothy i., ii., where we shall find, with much ecclesiastical instruction, little development doctrinally of the characters and dispensational positions of Christ.

The frequency of the term, God our Saviour, in Titus is striking. It may be well to notice that it is found also in Timothy, and is characteristic of what are called the pastoral epistles, more directly connected with Christ in Titus, but possibly, in one case at any rate, referring to God as God. The comparison of these passages will lead, under God's grace, to deeper acquaintance with the mind of God. It is in facilitating such research that this index has its value.

I add another example. In the book of Revelation the titles not found elsewhere are far more numerous than those which are. It is a book of special dealings and dispensation, and is thus characterised, not by the simple personal name and title, Jesus Christ, with doctrines reasoned out connected with them ; but by the names which relate to those dealings.

The same will be found in a measure in the epistle to the Hebrews, where the special new position of the Christ is brought out in contrast with Judaism. In the Epistle of John, His person, God and man in one, becomes life and light in and to man, also gives more than one or two distinctive names.

The index will afford great help to those who, with a serious heart, search scripture to know Christ better. This they must do to make it really profitable, and study the names in their scriptural connection. It is not desirable, nor would it be useful as a mere table of names without this.

Here and there, there may be passages, the application of which to Christ may be doubtful,* and in some scriptures God and Christ are so united in the Spirit's mind in one person, that it is as difficult to distinguish them as it is in this case undesirable ; but the value of the index is just this, that it facilitates and suggests these inquiries. But I repeat, to use it to profit, it must be followed out in the study of the context of the inspired word.

* As Revelation xxi. 5, but here what is added is clearly elsewhere applied to Christ. So also Titus i. 3 ; iii. 4 ; but ii. 13 connects it with Christ directly. It is just in these inquiries that the index is useful.

CHRIST.

Romans v. 6. For we being still without strength, in (the) due time Christ has died for (the) ungodly.

8. But God commends His own love to us, in that, we being still sinners, Christ has died for us.

vi. 4. We have been buried therefore with Him by baptism unto death, in order that, even as Christ has been raised up from among (the) dead by the glory of the Father, so we also should walk in newness of life.

8, 9. Now if we have died with Christ, we believe that we shall also live with Him, knowing that Christ, having been raised up among (the) dead, dies no more ; death has dominion over Him no more.

viii. 2, 10. But ye are not in flesh but in Spirit, if indeed God's Spirit dwell in you, but if any one has not (the) Spirit of Christ, he is not of Him ; but if Christ be in you, the body is dead on account of sin, but the Spirit life on account of righteousness. But if the Spirit of Him that has raised up Jesus from among (the) dead, dwell in you, He that has raised up Christ from among (the) dead shall quicken your mortal bodies also on account of His Spirit which dwells in you.

17. And if children heirs also ; heirs of God, and Christ's joint-heirs, if indeed we suffer with (Him) that we may also be glorified with (Him).

34, 35. (It is) God who justifies. Who is he that condemns? (It is) Christ who has died, but rather has been also raised up : who is also at the right hand

xii. 5. Thus we, (being) many, are one body in Christ, and each one members one of the other.

But if there is not a resurrection of (those that are) dead, neither is Christ raised; but if Christ is not raised, then, indeed, vain also (is) our preaching.

16, 17, 18, 19, 20. For if (those that are) dead are not raised, neither is Christ raised; but if Christ be not raised, your faith (is) vain; ye are yet in your sins. Then indeed also, those who have fallen asleep in Christ have perished. If in this life only, we have hope in Christ, we are (the) most miserable of all men. But now Christ is raised from among (the) dead, first-fruits of those that are fallen asleep.
